SUMMARY

Re: Francis J. Curry
516 S. Western Ave.
Joliet, Illinois

SYNOPSIS:

The subject, FRANCIS J. CURRY, is a gambler, hoodlum and racketeer who is an important member of the Gusik-Accardo-Ricca organization alleged to be a right-hand for Ricca. Along with FRANKIE LAPORTE, EMERY and JOHN ROBERTS he controls all mob interests for the south section of the State along the line drawn from Rockford to Blue Island to Michigan City and south to the state line. Subject owns several handbooks, slot machine routes and juke box routes of his own. He is the mob's spokesman for the unions in that territory including bartenders and waitresses, teamsters, laborers, retail clerks, electricians and wholesale (warehouse) food handlers.

During the period of the Trans America News Service he was an important cog in setting up the network in this part of the country operating both as top man in the Joliet area and sales representative in the Louisville area. CURRY was a suspect in the slaying of LEAH KELLY former slot machine and juke box king in the Joliet area and subject's rise and importance dates from that incident. During Paul Ricca's sojourn in the federal penitentiary, resulting from his conviction in the movie extortion case, subject managed Ricca's 1103 acre farm in Lisbon, Illinois.

His father was a small time gambler who died a natural death and he had 2 brothers who were in bootlegging and gambling on a small scale operation with the subject. Both brothers were found dead in a wrecked automobile and the coroner found 2 bullet holes in one of them. CURRY came into power immediately following the death of the Kelly brothers who previously had a monopoly in the slot machine and juke box operations in the Joliet area.

He is married [redacted]
